Half Term Break

As we close for the February Half-Term break I thank you all for your support over the last few weeks. I think I say every year that it is one of the hardest half terms for everyone, coming after Christmas, with the long dark nights and gloomy mornings. This year we have additionally dealt with the winter bugs that have also been doing the rounds. When we return we will notice the lengthening days and the march to spring starts to put a bounce in all our steps.

One thing this weeks sudden snow fall did was show the importance of preparedness for these situations. We had some children coming in with the flat ballet style shoes, and thin coats. Through the winter period we need children prepared for the changeable weather as they will be outside for some of the time most days.

Ingleborough Hall kit lists will be coming out shortly. Please don't buy anything special—and contact school if you need support with anything. All the waterproofs and boots are provided.

Reading Journals

One of the key ways of working together to support our children is through their reading journals. We have these printed for every child, every year at considerable expense, but they are packed with useful information and activities. From practice times tables to book reviews, alongside reading there are lots of ways to engage. We are looking at how Dojo points can be awarded for children remembering to take them home daily and look after them.
